A Message from Mark S. Earley, Supervisor of Elections

Voting is the most important expression of our collective wisdom.

As your Supervisor of Elections, my job is to provide outstanding voter services and secure elections you can trust.

To this end, I pledge this office will:

- Always function in a wholly nonpartisan manner.
- Always use paper ballots as the method to capture your vote.
- Continually improve the security of elections.
- Provide materials such as this Voter Guide to help educate citizens about how, when, and where to vote.
- Provide full access to voting regardless of a voter's physical ability or language barriers. And,
- Lead the state in verifying that our results are true and accurate by conducting full, transparent, and timely audits of every ballot in every election.

Just as we are hard at work for you and our democracy, I ask you to do your part by taking an active role.

Be smart. Educate yourself about the candidates and issues. Don't necessarily believe the worst or most divisive reports you hear from any source – these stories are often gross exaggerations designed to sell advertisements or divide us as a nation. Consider working at the polls on election day, even running for office or advocating for a cause.

Most importantly — VOTE in 2022.

Mark S. Earley

Leon County Supervisor of Elections

Election Integrity

We are committed to accuracy and transparency.

That is why we conduct a 100% audit of every election. We double-check every vote to ensure that the election results are accurate. Our systems are certified by the Florida Department of State and we test them before and after each election. And critically, all voting in Florida is done using a paper ballot.

There are layers of security and procedures that maintain the integrity of our elections. We conduct maintenance on the voter registration list every year to ensure that only eligible voters are registered. And before someone can be added to the voter rolls, we verify their identity.

Voting-by-Mail has similar safeguards. We only mail out ballots when a voter has requested one. When we receive the ballot back, we do not remove it from the envelope until after we have confirmed that it was returned by the voter through signature verification.

All this activity takes place in a public environment. Poll watchers can observe in-person voting. We only open and count Vote-by-Mail ballots during public meetings. Nearly every record related to the election is a public record open to inspection or copying.

Our elections are secure, and the results can be trusted. Learn more at LeonVotes.gov/Trust.

Your Party Affects Your Primary Election Ballot

Florida is a “closed primary” election state. The races and candidates that appear on your primary election ballot depend on your party affiliation.

You may only vote in a partisan race in a primary election if you are a registered member of that political party. Frequently however, there are non-partisan races on the primary ballot. You can vote in these races regardless of your party affiliation.

In addition, if all candidates for an office have the same party affiliation, and the winner of the primary will be elected to office, then you can vote in that race regardless of party affiliation. This is known as a “universal primary.”

If you do not select a political party, you will be registered with “No Party Affiliation.”

General Election

In a general election, you can vote for any candidates on your ballot, regardless of party affiliation.

Redistricting

What Is Redistricting?

Many officials are elected from political divisions called districts, including the Florida House and Senate, the U.S. House of Representatives, and the Leon County Commission and School Board. (The Tallahassee City Commission does not have districts.) Redistricting is the process for updating these districts to balance population after each census.

Why Are Districts Changing?

Every ten years, the United States census counts each person in the country. The Census Bureau uses this information to assign seats in the U.S. House of Representatives. Since Florida's population increased, we gained a seat that must be added to Florida's map of congressional districts.

Elected officials must also make sure that population is evenly distributed across districts. Since populations change over time, district lines are redrawn so that each district has the same number of people. This ensures that every voter has the same amount of power when casting their ballot.

How Does Redistricting Affect Me?

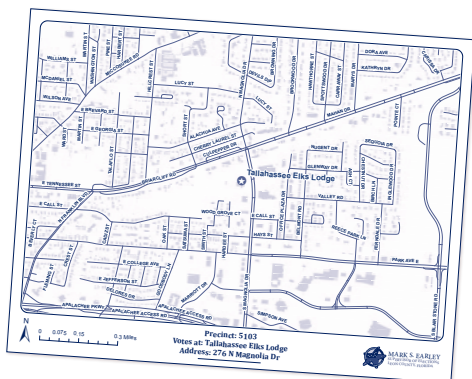

Once the new districts are drawn, we must draw new precinct lines to align with the new districts. Once this is complete, you may belong to different set of districts and a new voting precinct. When you vote, you will see candidates for your new district assignments.

Some polling places will change as well. Starting with the 2022 Primary Election, you may have a new Election Day polling place.

How Will I Learn About my New Districts and Polling Place?

Once redistricting is complete, we will mail new voter information cards. The card lists your districts, precinct, and Election Day polling place. We will mail these cards out in the summer of 2022.

You can check your current districts, precinct, and Election Day polling place by visiting LeonVotes.gov.
